

DIFFERENT LEVELS OF GLOBAL PROBLEMS

Sardorbek Makhmudjon ugli Usmonov

Independent researcher of Andizhan State University, Republic of Uzbekistan

Abstract: In the article has been analyzed the importance of this is explained by the fact that the political globalization of the time is increasingly expanding and interdependent political relations between countries, peoples and regions, and as a result, it leads to their unification as well.*

Key words: importance, economic growth, political relation, political globalization, development.*

INTRODUCTION

The factors that ensure the stable economic growth of the state today and in the future are directly related to the development of the education sector. Therefore, from the first years of independence, in the process of fundamental economic reform, the creation and development of a new continuous education system aimed at taking a worthy place in the world in the field of education was set as a priority task [1].

RESEARCH METHODS

The importance of this is explained by the fact that the political globalization of the time is increasingly expanding and interdependent political relations between countries, peoples and regions, and as a result, it leads to their unification. This shows that according to their political scale, all countries will be connected to one social and political network. In this process, there are several factors that threaten the national sovereignty of states.

RESULTS AND DISCUSSIONS

First of all, international organizations, concerns, non-governmental organizations and powerful political entities conquering international markets are emerging in the world political arena. This is causing a decrease in the position of the independence of national statehood, which is a usual subject of politics.

Secondly, this process affects the rules and norms of international law. On the other hand, this reality is partially threatening the independence of the states protected by law in their territory. As a result, states are limiting their ability to independently solve internal and external socio-political issues. For example, today, disputes and problems in the internal situation of a country: various internal conflicts, mutual political struggles, various situations that arise during the election process, have become a global issue, and as a result of the intervention of other countries, the fire is getting bigger.

Thirdly, as a result of globalization, territorial integrity, which determines the basis of statehood in individual society, is losing its traditional form and naturally lowering the position of state power. In a word, national borders are gradually being "washed away".

Fourthly, the process of "democratization" is accelerating under the leadership of some countries of the Western world, as a result of which strong pressure is being exerted from the outside on the development of other countries based on the democratic principles of their choice. In simple words, the founders of the "global idea" who are trying to divert this process to their well-thought-out interests, are trying to destroy the political will of other countries and take control of the management system. For example, the various "political revolutions" that took place in a number of CIS member states before 2005 were the product of that "idea", and we also experienced its tragic complications. The analysis of these events shows that the developed countries are trying to violate the principle of non-interference in the sovereignty and internal politics of other countries while hiding behind the veil. At this point, A.V. Buzgalin said, "Globalization has a strong influence on politics, strengthens the dependence of countries on each other in the field of security and economy, and leads to a deep change in the priorities of each of them on the world stage. By forcing to look at the arsenal of foreign political tools from a different point of view, it will lead to the acceleration of the process of gradualization of the agenda of world politics" [2].

The Internet is a product of the power of human thought, mind and knowledge, and today it is a global computer network covering the whole world. The speed of the Internet, cheap wide-ranging communication, ease of collaboration, software that allows everyone to work, and a unique database are attractive. Without denying the advantages of the global network, it is necessary to take into account its influence and dangers on the spirituality of young people. In several countries of the world, there are websites of organized terrorist groups and organizations, through which foreign ideas that do not correspond to the minds and lifestyle of young people are being promoted. Also, pages with pornographic content harm the education and morals of the young generation.

CONCLUSION

Nowadays, young people access the Internet mainly to search for news, make new friends and communicate, download music, and get the information they need. If young people use the Internet to select and analyze information that serves the national interest and helps its development, their spirituality and thinking will grow, and young people with an information-demanding culture will not fall under negative and biased influence.

REFERENCES:

1. Жўраев Н. Тарих фалсафасининг назарий асослари.-Тошкент: Маънавият, 2006. –Б 67
2. Малюкова О.В. Материя, пространство и время с точки зрения физики XX века / Онтология, гносеология, логика и аналитическая философия. – СПб.: 1997. – С.93.